1- There are pages and pages of educational resources provided by CSWE. They are located here: <https://www.cswe.org/Education-Resources> (Links to an external site.)

2- The CSWE curricular guides are another excellent resource for this type of learning. <https://www.cswe.org/Education-Resources/2015-Curricular-Guides> (Links to an external site.) There are 7 guides linked to the 2015 EPAS and each are excellent. Embedded in each are learning activities for students.

3- The CSWE Center for Diversity and Economic and Social Justice is also an excellent resource for this. The Center puts out an educator resource each month that can help with meaningful activities, readings, and even assessments, depending on the topic: <https://www.cswe.org/Centers-Initiatives/Centers/Center-for-Diversity/Educator-Resource> (Links to an external site.)

4- You can also have students make an account in CSWE SPARK the new online platform for social workers. <https://spark.cswe.org/home> (Links to an external site.)

They can create a student community, join affinity communities, and share resources, experiences, etc.
